MEMBER OF WHAT?

Unionized workplace – collective agreement

Employees are “members” of a bargaining unit

BUT, are they also “Members” of the union?

If yes, are they voluntary or forced members by law or collective agreement?

HAS ITS PRIVILEGES!

To run/vote for union president or other office

To participate in ratification/strike votes

To be disciplined/fined (can union collect?)

To lose "Membership"

To lose your job for loss of "Membership"
(some provinces have some protections)

Most allow loss of job for loss of "Membership"
for non-payment of dues

UNION DUES

NOT the same issue as membership

Almost all unionized Canadians pay full dues

Why?

Dues "check-off" in labour codes and collective agreements

Dues of non-members of union can be used for political & other non-bargaining unit purposes

TERMINOLOGY DIFFERENCES

"unionized" & "closed shop"

Sweden/"Europe"

Term not really used

If it was: unionized = actual members of the union - only

Not unionized = non-members & those not covered by a CA at all

Canada/US

Both members & non-members covered by a collective agreement

How Canadian labour experts define "closed shop" may NOT be the same as the European Court of Human Rights

SUPREME COURT OF CANADA

2 KEY CASES

Advance Cutting & Coring (2001): Clearly read right of non-association into Charter, said Quebec forced membership a violation but allowed under Sec. 1 of Charter due to history of union violence and vandalism in the Quebec construction sector.

Lavigne (1991): Effectively upheld compulsory dues, used for "non-collective bargaining purposes", including for political purposes as reasonable limits under Section 1 of Charter. Membership for Lavigne was voluntary based on a Rand Formula agency shop clause. Existence and scope of freedom to not associate very uncertain.

AGENDA/OBJECTIVES

Overview European political and Court system

Summarize European history of:

- End of closed shop – forced membership

NOTE: Definition of closed shop in Canada & Europe not necessarily the same

- End of non-member dues for politics & other non-bargaining purposes

Compare to Canadian situation & Supreme Court cases

YOUNG, JAMES & WEBSTER v. UK (1981)

Legislation changed to allow post-entry closed shop collective agreements. Employer signs one on a renewal. Some employees opposed to union political agenda. Applicants refused to join; employer fired per union

- Judgment's effect: right of non-association even though it had been specifically considered and left out of Convention.
- Did not rule on all forms of closed shops, just post-entry
- Loss of livelihood struck at the very substance of freedom of association
- Other rights noted as factors: conscience and opinion (Art. 9 and 10)

SIGURJONSSON v. ICELAND (1993)

Taxi driver compelled member of professional organization. Applicant stopped paying membership fees, he did not share view on limiting competition. Expelled and lost license.

- Repetition of Young ruling re post-entry, but not a union and not clear cut post-entry; might be pre- entry case
- After adoption of legislation confirming compulsion he rejoined "Frami"
- ECHR - no jurisdiction to rule on the issue of expulsion, but could rule on the compulsion to join
- Court found Art. 11 violation since applicant faced the dilemma of joining organization or no work. Also noted right of conscience and opinion (Art. 9 and 10) as factor

SWEDISH LABOUR LAW

Master agreements

Substitute agreements

Closed shops in some master agreements until 1992-1993 and in many substitute agreements

No domestic statute protecting freedom from forced association

No restrictions on using dues of non-members for political purposes & non-bargaining unit purposes

COUNCIL OF EUROPE SOCIAL COMMITTEE ACTIONS

- Played a key role in the ending of 10,000 to 15,000 Swedish closed shops (in substitute agreements)
- 4 reports of violations in 14 years 1988-2002
- Some closed shops eliminated
- 2002: Collective complaint by the confederation of Swedish Enterprises (employers)
- 2003: Social Committee demands full resolution by next Report in 2005

Europarådets ministerkommitté, som är den slutliga instansen, ville i sitt uttalande från den 24 september inte fälla Sverige för kränkning av de mänskliga rättigheterna eftersom arbetet med att rensa ut organisationsklausulerna redan har påbörjats.

Han anser att facket hade goda skäl för att en gång i tiden införa organisationsklausulerna. De var viktiga för att värna om medlemmarnas jobb och motverka lönedumping. Men han säger att "normen är en annan nu" och han har också respekt för arbetsgivarnas hållning att klausulerna bör försvinna.

- De har också sina legitima intressen, jag kan inte fördöma det.

Granskningsarvodena, som arbetsgivarna också ifrågasätter, är genom beskedet från Europarådet närmast en icke-fråga, anser arbetslivsministern.

CECILIA JACOBSSON

SØRENSEN & RASMUSSEN v. DENMARK (2006)

Sørensen

- University student applied for job, to last 10 weeks
- Job application required union membership
- Sørensen opposed union's political agenda
- Refused to pay membership fees, lost membership; fired
- Danish Supreme Court had banned post-entry, but not pre-entry
- Sørensen aware of requirement before employment, Danish Court ruled in favour of union pre-entry okay

Rasmussen

- Confederation union member but did not support political affiliations
- Resigned & joined a Christian union
- After period of unemployment offered job conditional on joining Confederation union
- He took the job, rejoined but still did not support its' political affiliations
- Applies to European Court of Human Rights claiming violation

EUROPEAN COURT OF HUMAN RIGHTS

Sørensen Grand Chamber Judgment

- Did not address equality of negative & positive freedom of association; but did not exclude possibility they are equal
- Found no reason to distinguish between post & pre-entry
- Recognised personal autonomy as a principle of Convention's guarantees
- Danish Government argued applicants merely subscribing to a "non-political membership". Court responded:

"...it is to be observed that such "non-political membership" does not entail any reduction in the payment of the membership fee to the specific trade union. In any event, there is no guarantee that "non-political membership" will not give rise to some form of indirect support for the political parties to which the specific trade union contributes financially."

Art. 11 applicable, next question: interference justified?

EUROPEAN COURT OF HUMAN RIGHTS

Sørensen Grand Chamber Judgment

Danish Government had a hard time justifying system

Court found little need for closed shops in modern society since trade unions have grown to be strong organizations

"...there is little support . . . for the maintenance of closed shop agreements...and that their use in the labour market is not an indispensable tool for the effective enjoyment of trade-union freedoms."

Conclusion – The end of closed shops in 47 COE countries

EVALDSSON v. SWEDEN (2007)

- Master Agreement, construction sector, union monitored member & non-member wages for fee of 1.5 %
- Monitored piece-work & time-salary; latter easier - less expensive
- 5 unorganized employees (non-members) of 8 total directed employer to stop deductions. Employer complied
- Union claimed violation of Master Agreement
- Employer organization applied to the Swedish Labour Court claiming violation of the right not to associate - Art. 11
- Labour Court cited Young, found no compulsion as non-members did not become members merely by paying the monitoring fees
- Labour Court avoided issue of whether the system generated a surplus for the union

EVALDSSON

JUDGMENT

Court found violation based on right of possession – (property rights)

Court declined to rule on freedoms: from forced association, conscience & opinion

Court found entitlement to verification that fees or dues collected by union corresponded to union's costs of representation:

" This was even more important as they had to pay the fees against their will to an organization with a political agenda which they did not support. "

CONCLUSIONS EVALDSSON

Mere suspicion "dues" used for non-bargaining purposes (political, social, etc) was enough to find violation

Transparent accounting to non-members required if dues imposed on non-members

Lack of information violated human right to Peaceful Enjoyment of Possessions (property rights)

Evaldsson & Sørensen together render union dues imposed on non-members for non-bargaining purposes illegal under European Convention on Human Rights

FINAL REMARKS

UN Declaration of Human Rights not yet a Canadian reality.
"No one may be compelled to belong to an association"

Used by SCC & ECHR to read in freedom from forced association

Supreme Court of Canada taking note of European developments prior to Sørensen and Evaldsson – what will they do with these?

"Special circumstances" in Advance justify forced membership; likely not available to justify provincial laws allowing or requiring "closed shops" or forced membership/conditional employment

Canadian "Rand Formula": union dues for political & non-bargaining purposes imposed on non-members would be struck down in Europe as "disproportionate"
