

Union Leaders are putting YOUR money where THEIR mouths are.

Union dues are supposed to support collective bargaining. Yet in Canada, some union leaders use your dues to support other activities, such as political ad campaigns. Without your consent. Regardless of whether you agree or disagree with what's being said. With no way for you to opt out of funding these campaigns.

The recent negative political ad campaign launched by some Alberta union leaders looks expensive. And while quick to criticize the accountability of others, they refuse to disclose how much these ads cost. Don't you think it's time workers had a choice in deciding whether their union dues should be spent attacking politicians?
