Internet Site Keeps A Watch On Labour Laws

The National Citizens Coalition has helped found and finance a new Internet site that will help provide answers to workers with questions about unions and unionization.

It's called Labour Watch and you can visit it at www.labourwatch.com

The site, which is operated by the Canadian Labour Watch Association, answers questions like: "How do I decertify a union?" "What if I have signed a union card but don't support the union?" "What are my rights?"

In addition, Labour Watch provides excellent links to labour relation boards and to departments of labour across the country.

All in all, it's an excellent resource for workers, who all too often only get the pro-union side of the story.

Freedom Watch is an e-mail publication of the National Citizens Coalition.
